Sarah Wright was born in Hull and has lived in the city throughout her adult life.

Having qualified as a Nursery Nurse in the mid-80s Sarah began her career working in a Primary School in Hull. She completed a part time degree with the Open University and gained a BSC (Hons) in Psychology.

She worked for ten years in the NHS with a team of school nurses delivering health education sessions within schools across Hull.

She then joined East Riding of Yorkshire Council in 2005. She has progressed through the organisation and has recently retired from her post as Head of Pupil Engagement where she sat on the senior leadership team of the education and schools service within the children, families and school's directorate. Her role involved leading the Council's services that oversaw school attendance, elective home education, children missing education, school exclusions, tuition services for pupils too ill to attend school and licensing for children and young people involved in employment and entertainment.
