

Les Gomm – Member of the Constellation Trust

Having completed a Mechanical Manufacturing Apprenticeship from 1977-1983 I joined the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, serving for 22 years as an Artisan Armourer. I travelled throughout the world on both Military operations and exercises. Having been decorated for this service I retired as a Veteran in 2005. The position enabled me to develop not only my Engineering skills but also gained qualifications in Health and Safety. Throughout this time, I was also responsible for the training of young apprentices in various Engineering disciplines and therefore developed the Assessor qualifications.

On completion of this service I moved to my current position with Humberside Engineering Training Association. Working with apprentices and developing training courses for Large Blue Chip companies as well as SME's. This position has also enabled me to qualify in both Management and Verification qualifications.

In addition to being an active STEM ambassador for a number of years, I was elected as the Parent Director to Sirius Academy Multi Academy Trust (SAMAT) in 2013.
